Charles Northern, MD., a government consultant and one of the earliest nutritional physicians, explained the reason many years ago. He said: "It is not commonly realised that the vitamins control the body's appropriation of minerals...in the absence of minerals vitamins have no function. Lacking vitamins, the system can make use of minerals, but lacking minerals, the vitamins are useless."

Some vitamins can only be made available to the body if minerals are present to work with.

Why Take Minerals?

“Ionic minerals are already in a form that the body recognizes and understands so they can be easily assimilated through the selectively permeable cell membranes.”
